“Luxury is the love of detail” – historic and modern shake hands in the newly-renovated Suites of The Westin Grand Berlin

Berlin, spring 2006 – The ten historically-themed Suites have long been considered to be the secret of the Berlin luxury hotel, The Westin Grand, by guests from home and abroad. Newly refurbished and with all kinds of up-to-date extras, they nevertheless keep their individual charm and afford not just the historically-interested guest an exciting trip into the past. An uplifting interior, technical sophistication and grand marble bathrooms, are assured by the youngest person in London to gain the European Design Award 2004 in the “Best Guest Room Design” category - the incredible Berlin interior designer, Tassilo Bost, from Bost Interior Designs.

Famous German personalities from past centuries influence the furnishings and décor of the Themed Suites. The chattels of their time, opulent carpets and curtains, replicas of original documents, the odd antique and individual accessories fashion the 60-metre-square Suites. Goethe, Humboldt or Bach; Lessing, Menzel or Fontane – they are all represented in the Berlin Westin Grand. A journey back in time which doesn't preclude a glimpse of the present. The luxurious bathrooms with a unique, revitalising shower, under-floor heating and select Bvlgari cosmetics as well as LCD flat screens, DVD players, W-Lan and light dimmer in the living quarters clearly bestow all the comforts of the 21st Century. The luxury of a hotel can be measured by its Suites; in the Westin Grand Berlin this standard is particularly high. “Luxury is the love of detail!”, is the maxim of the hotel “in the service area, just as in the furnishings of the guest rooms. A butler and limousine service as well as majestic orchids in the guest room give the first clue. Our guests should feel at home with us – you could say, “home, suite home”.
